DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

---

The Hopewell Methodist Church is a mid 19th century Romanesque Revival brick structure at the intersection of Hopewell Road and Adams Road. The church faces southwest with the primary gable running from northeast to southwest.

The main block consists of a 1½ story three bay by three bay five course common bond brick block with gable roof that rests on a fieldstone foundation. A three story pyramidal roofed bell tower rises on the southwest corner. A 20th century single story brick addition has been added to the southeast corner for associated church activities.

The main elevation (SW) is dominated by the tri-partite arched colored glass windows and arched double door tower entrance. Each door has five molded panels and a colored glass transom is found overhead. The second floor of the tower stair is lighted by a narrow single pane sash window. The second and third floor is usually separated by a cornice molding with separate string molding below. The pyramidal wood shingle bell tower roof is supported by four corner brick piers. A turned baluster railing stretches between each pier. Two molded wood string courses stretch around the tower and coincide with the handrail level and top of the tower opening. The roof is extended beyond the main walls. The roof slope kicks out when it nears the base of the roof. The peak is capped with a metal knob probably made of iron or copper.

The three windows are centered on the main block with a larger round arched window in the center which is separated by heavy arched muntins. The smaller side windows are a plain double sash with arched top window. The eastern window has been covered by the 20th century brick addition. A small five pane lunette lights the upper level of the structure. The eaves are extended and the fascia molded.

The west side of the church is three bays deep with the additional tower bay. The first floor of the tower has a arched colored glass window. The second and third floor is the same as described for the main elevation. The main block has three arched two pane colored sash. The eave is also extended on the sides of the church. A stuccoed brick stove stack rises out of the northwest corner of the main block.

The north end of the church is pierced by the same tri-partite colored glass arched sash. The east side of the church is covered by a shed addition. A late 18th, 19th and 20th century cemetery is directly north and east of the structure.

The church also owns a  $1\frac{1}{2}$  story three bay by four bay rectangular frame community activity structure across the street. The weatherboard frame rests on a fieldstone foundation and is covered by a medium sloped tin roof with extended eaves and exposed rafter ends. The building faces east with the main roof running east/west.

The main elevation consists of a central entrance with bracketed shed protection which is flanked by two window openings now covered. The surrounds have a simple cap molding. A small occulus attic window or ventilator has been covered also.

The north and south sides have four covered openings. A brick stove stack rises out of the northwest corner of the structure.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Hopewell Methodist congregation has worshiped at this site since the late 18th century and this is the second church structure on the site. The Romanesque Revival Church was built in 18 . The church is plain in comparison to elaborate Romanesque Revival structures but follows the period in general massing with the asymmetrically placed pyramidal bell tower. The round arch window and door openings, characteristic of Romanesque Revival structures <sup>are</sup> and taken from the much earlier period of Romanesque Architecture ( 11th, 12th, and 13th century European Building Style).

The activity building is a typical frame structure used for various purposes and is especially similar to 19th century school houses.
